Security Conditions for Secretary Kissinger's Latin American Trip

Security services in the countries to be visited by Secretary Kissinger will be alert to possible threats to the Secretary and his party and will take all necessary precautions to protect them. Any demonstrations that might occur will be controlled and are not likely to place the Secretary or members of his party in any physical danger. An assassination attempt against the Secretary or someone in his party by an individual or extremist group cannot be completely ruled out, however, in any of the cities he is visiting.

SECRETWest Germans Seeking International Cooperation Against Terrorism

West German politicians and security officials have become deeply concerned about the number of terrorist incidents in their country and the international contacts of German terrorists, according to a recent U.S. embassy report, and hope to reach agreements with other nations to cooperate in the suppression of terrorism. In addition to the three well publicized international terrorist incidents involving West German anarchists in 1975--the kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, the attack on the FRG embassy in Stockholm, and the seizure of OPEC ministers in Vienna--a large number of incidents took place inside the FRG.

The primary mission of the guerrillas allegedly is to develop terrorist activity in the continental U.S. and Puerto Rico during the Bicentennial celebrations. A secondary objective is to provoke confrontations between the populace of Panama and U.S. military personnel in the Canal Zone. Younger university students in Puerto Rico and Panama are being recruited, and some Cuban residents of Puerto Rican descent have been drafted for this training.

[REDACTED] guerrillas trained under this project are suspected of bombing several U.S. government buildings in Miami in early December, using the Cuban exile community in Miami as cover.

Checks of two Alitalia flights bound for West Germany proved negative.

The Kuwaiti press of 29 December 1975 reported the conviction and sentencing of five members of the Arab Communist Organization accused of bombing the offices of the American Life Insurance Company last April. [REDACTED] Two of the terrorists had escaped from Kuwait before the others were arrested in July, and they were given life sentences in absentia. The three in custody were sentenced to 15, 7 and 3 years in prison, and are to be deported on completion of their sentences. Several other ACO terrorists were arrested in July in Syria and Lebanon. Those in Syria were sentenced shortly after the arrests, and some were executed. The fate of those arrested in Lebanon is not known. [REDACTED]

25X1A New Terrorist Weapon?

Pipe bombs, book bombs, and even candy bombs are old hat in the terrorist arena. Someone has come up with a different approach to intimidation and persuasion. Last week in India a university secretary and a government official opened their mail and found snakes therein. When the secretary opened a package, a two-foot cobra emerged. With its hood raised, the snake tried to attack the secretary. The snake was captured and placed in a jug. Officials called in a snake charmer who said the cobra was indeed poisonous. In the other instance, a government official in New Delhi found a small poisonous snake in a package he opened. In neither case was anyone injured. While it presents somewhat of a local threat, we do not expect this venomous technique to have any impact on the international scene.

Where's Carlos?

Since his disappearance following his arrival in Libya after the December OPEC terrorist incident in Vienna, there have been numerous reports that Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos, has been seen in various countries.

25X1

Concern for the security of Secretary of State Kissinger during his February visit to Latin America increased the incidence of reports that Carlos was in Latin America, together with members of his group, planning a terrorist operation against the Secretary and his party.

Meanwhile, it can be expected that travel of key public figures or the scheduling of important public events will continue to generate unconfirmed reports of the appearance of Carlos throughout the world.

- c. Material concessions such as food and blankets might be permitted, but no political concessions may be granted.
- d. The lives of captives should be safeguarded as far as possible.

The Prime Minister and Justice Minister added that there is no legal or moral obligation on governments to honor deals made with terrorists, but a breach of promise would endanger lives in future cases.

Various measures were proposed during the debate to minimize the possibility of future terrorist actions. The Justice Minister agreed to consider legislation to make "conspiracy to commit terrorist acts" a criminal offense. (Owing to a lack of such legislation, the fedayeen terrorists arrested in September could be charged only with illegal possession of weapons.) It was also suggested that the authorities tighten up enforcement of existing legislation against private possession of weapons.

ASEAN Discussion of Policy Toward Terrorism

At the mid-February senior officials meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Jakarta, the delegates accepted, with minor modification, the text of a Philippine proposal for an ASEAN concord to be signed at the 23 February ASEAN summit meeting in Indonesia. The proposed concord is a general statement of intention to cooperate in various areas of mutual interest. The original text of one provision read: "They shall cooperate in deterring crimes committed in the high seas and other international crimes such as terrorism, hijacking, kidnapping and traffic in drugs and in arms as threats to national and regional security."

The Indonesian and Malaysian delegates recommended that the word "terrorism" be deleted from the above paragraph. (Presumably the terms "hijacking" and "kidnapping" remained.) They pointed out that with their large Muslim populations, they must consider the sensitivities of the Middle East countries, which might accuse them of participating in joint action against the Arabs. The Philippine delegation argued that terrorism, whether staged by the Japanese Red Army or by the Palestine Liberation Organization, should be condemned by everyone. The Malaysians and Indonesians protested that their countries oppose international terrorism and favor a strong ASEAN program for preventing terrorism, but they can not concur in anything that would give the appearance of condemning the Arabs. The Philippine delegation agreed to delete the reference to terrorism, with the understanding that in practice the matter of terrorism would be prosecuted vigorously throughout the ASEAN region by all intelligence and security channels.

Emotionally Disturbed Gunman Takes Over Canadian Embassy in Beirut

Mohammed Haymour, a naturalized Canadian citizen of Lebanese birth, and six Lebanese relatives seized the Canadian embassy in Beirut on 23 February and held about 27 people hostage for almost eight hours before being persuaded to give up. Haymour's motives for the attack seem to be personal rather than political. He apparently was deported from Canada on grounds of insanity, which he was contesting. He demanded the return of an island near Vancouver he claimed he had bought, as well as the custody of four children left with his wife in Canada. Haymour agreed to surrender to a mixed group of Lebanese, Palestinian and Syrian officers when guaranteed "safe conduct" by the Palestine Liberation Army and the Sa'iqa group. No one was injured in the encounter.
